Metabolism of 4-hydroxy-2,3-pentadienoic acid, a phospholipid derived metabolite in rat heart. We examined the metabolism of 4-hydroxy-2,3-pentadienoic acid (4-HPVA), a novel phospholipid-derived metabolite, in rat heart. After incubation with [14C]4-HPVA, $^{14}\text{CO}_2$ was the major labeled metabolite and there was no metabolite detected in the following extraction. In the homogenate, the metabolism of 4-HPVA was dependent on protein concentration. There were similar rates of metabolism in both cardiac and vascular tissue. The presence of either dicarboxylic acid or glycerophospholipid was essential for the metabolism of 4-HPVA. Acid phosphatase completely inactivated 4-HPVA metabolism. Our results suggest that in rat heart 4-HPVA is metabolized to CO_2 by four enzymes: a beta-oxidation enzyme, a glycerophospholipid or acyl carrier protein-dependent lyase, a glycerophospholipid or acyl carrier protein-dependent dehydrase and an acyl-CoA ligase.

On the second anniversary of the launch of the World's biggest cryptocurrency, Coinmarketcap, exchanges have become a lot more competitive. Despite the similarities, one can see clear differences between the start and end of 2017. Despite this, the crypto market cap reached new records this year. Coinmarketcap, the website that is dedicated to providing a single source of information on the crypto markets, announced the official release of Coinmarketcap v5.0, their most popular version to date. Launched in January 2017, Coinmarketcap ranked 33rd in the list of the top 100,000 most visited websites in the United States. Two years later, the site ranks 4th on the list of the top 100,000 most visited sites in the US, reaching an all-time high. It has managed to become the top 30 most visited site in two consecutive months. The success of the site has led to a demand for its services, with the number of daily visits has nearly doubled this year.
