More Than 300 Athletes Have Been Doped, but WADA Is Still in Denial More than 300 athletes have been reported to the World Anti-Doping Agency (WADA) in the last two years for suspected doping, and WADA is still rejecting their claims. In a statement released on Thursday, the organization said more than 300 athletes had been reported to WADA since January 2014, but many of the athletes' appeals have been rejected. WADA has been "receiving an increasing number of appeals for cases of athletes who believe that they have been subjected to adverse analytical findings," the statement said. But the organization continues to maintain that the methodology used to test athletes is reliable and that many of the reported cases are false, according to the BBC. After testing samples at the London Olympics, WADA said that it had determined that 10 Russian athletes had been doping in violation of anti-doping rules. The agency conducted another round of tests at this year's Olympics, but found no evidence of doping in any of the athletes who competed in London. On Tuesday, the agency announced that two Russian cyclists had tested positive for a banned substance, which the organization said was given to them in a drink. A WADA spokesperson told the BBC that the agency is still receiving reports of athletes who tested positive at the London Games, and that some of those claims will be investigated.

"But we also recognize that for many athletes, the cases that we are looking into may have been motivated by resentment," the spokesperson told the BBC.

software IBM says it will use AI to help automate banking Digital Advice is IBM's new AI-powered customer service platform which uses chatbots to automate tasks such as applying for credit, helping people set up accounts and assessing their needs. "Our customers tell us they want a way to get clear answers in minutes instead of hours, and we need to provide that,” said David Helft, vice president and general manager for IBM Digital Advice, in an interview. “That’s why we decided to focus on the challenges of banking and credit.” Advisers will be able to use chatbots to do financial planning, research whether someone qualifies for credit cards and apply for loans online. Advisors will also be able to conduct case management using live chat. The platform uses AI and is powered by AI assistant, Watson. It is able to process tens of thousands of questions per second and can help people apply for loans, find mortgages, compare rates and avoid scams. Women's Health Water retention is more prevalent in pregnancy. To summarize in one word, a healthy pregnancy means a healthy body! The system of your body needs to increase in size during pregnancy. This is called water retention and most of us feel water retention is inevitable. However, water retention does not mean an unhealthy pregnancy and there are remedies that you can do to improve your comfort. One of the first signs of the beginning of a healthy pregnancy is that your body can feel lighter, easier to walk and less full. You may also feel less tired and experience less bloating and heaviness. Pregnancy can cause a wide range of symptoms from feeling fatigued to severe symptoms such as abdominal distention, difficulty breathing, constipation, heartburn, lower back pain, and headache. Sometimes, symptoms of a healthy pregnancy are more severe and are often the reason for an abnormal or high-risk pregnancy. Pregnancy is a time of increased weight and expanded water and electrolyte stores in the body. The reason is to accommodate the growing embryo and fetus and provide nutrients for growth and development. The weight gain and the normal changes to the body do not mean a healthy pregnancy; that is why we need to know what to expect so we can monitor our body's changes. What are the
