A US judge has refused to dismiss a lawsuit accusing Trump aide Roger Stone of lying in an alleged plot to set up WikiLeaks founder Julian Assange. The government charged that in 2016 Mr Stone lied about his communications with Trump campaign official Jerome Corsi and a woman who says she had sex with Mr Assange. Mr Corsi was later told by prosecutors he would be indicted if he did not agree to testify against Mr Stone. The government said Mr Stone continued to lie about his communications with the woman even after his indictment and plea agreement. The California judge said Mr Stone's lying about his communications with the woman had a broad impact on the Mueller investigation, and said the case could proceed. Mr Stone had argued the case should be dismissed because of a previous ruling that said lying about testimony in a case could be charged as perjury. But Mr Uelmen said Mr Stone's lies about the woman were not perjury because they were not material, in that they did not "impede the grand jury's investigation or any ongoing investigation". Image: Roger Stone has said the Trump campaign had no contact with WikiLeaks Mr Uelmen said the government had to prove Mr Stone's lies hindered or obstructed the Mueller investigation and said that was not the case. He also said Mr Stone had a right to present evidence about the woman's case against Mr Assange. Stone case: Ex-Trump adviser Roger Stone still has to comply with one of his own subpoenas Mr Stone, a former Trump campaign advisor, was indicted in November last year for making false statements to the FBI and obstructing the agency's investigation. 570a42141b
