===== Lazy Ass has been developed by a long time regular tech junkie. It incorporates a refreshingly funky spin on the classic 2-hour exercise breaks scheduled at least once an hour. Lazy Ass is designed to encourage you to do as many of the activities in your choice as possible during your allotted free time, in effect stretching it out as far as possible. The more activity you do in your hour, the more you will earn. So simple, so effective, so "lazy". Upon purchase Lazy Ass will be installed into your system tray and will remind you at 50 minutes from the time it was last reminded. Lazy Ass has been updated to include : - Set time to remind - Block reminder until next day - Show more text - Show prize - Randomly select an activity - Add your own activities - Lazy ass is now your own online diary - Choose from my or a pre-defined list - Choice of themes - Extended message service - Set date reminder - Allow/block incoming calls - Set message to notify - Warn of time remaining - Easy to add, remove and resize activities - Easy to save, load and share activities - As the activity list is dynamically populated from within the application, the statistics for Lazy Ass are updated every time you add or remove an activity from the list - Lazy Ass can be completely configured from the main application window - You can also have more than one instance running Each Activity costs you 10 activity points and you earn 1 point for each of those activities that you complete. A simple 1-20 is used as a point system, to confuse the other Lazy Ass users as much as possible. Lazy Ass has very supportive users. The problem is that the number of users does mean that a large proportion of them end up spamming you with requests to be sent their tasks. The popularity of Lazy Ass means that constant updates to the application are inevitable, although I'll try to keep it down to 2 updates per week. Sorry for the inconvenience, I know there have been several times when I've spent more time on these releases than I planned. Suffice to say, Lazy Ass is the most useful modern "lazy ass" that I've come across and this version 2 beta release is the most recent to date. - Sébastien Lazy Ass

With Florida State's 2014 recruiting class in the books, it is time to take a look at how the Seminoles' coaching staff has maintained their position as one of the nation's elite programs. Head coach Jimbo Fisher hired the nation's top recruiting classes six of the previous seven years. So it seems a little early to be debating his staff's 2014-15 haul, but as it turns out, it already has reached another level. The Seminoles 09e8f5149f

IT IS NOT MEANT FOR THAT!The present invention relates to composite structures and methods of their manufacture. More particularly, the invention relates to composite structures having at least one cavity, and a method of manufacturing such a structure using inflatable mandrels. Composite materials are often used in the design of products that require parts with sophisticated shapes and low weight. Composite materials are especially useful in designing aircraft, missiles, rockets, and other aerospace and military vehicles. Composite materials can include various composite materials, for example, glass fiber reinforced polyester resin (GFRP), carbon fiber reinforced polyester resin, or plastic materials, such as carbon fiber reinforced plastic (CFRP), epoxy resin or pultruded composite laminates. The design of certain composite structures such as missile propellers is dependent on the use of an elongated metal mandrel that provides a means for installing composite structure skins and associated fasteners on the external surface of the composite structure. The metal mandrel protects the composite structure from abrasion during the alignment and fastening of the

What's New in the?

Lazy Ass is a program that will periodically give you an activity and ask you to do it. Notify you when you are idle For example, at 50 mins, an activity named LazyTime will be selected. If you have a lot of work to do, you can choose your first activity, be it an email, a visit to the gym or even a call to your mother. If you have no work to do, then you can choose to do some other activity and tell Lazy Ass to pick the next activity for you. Help you to do the activity on time Lazy Ass regularly check if you have finished a previous selected activity. If you don't want to do it today, it will give you other options. Thanks to the C++ project wxWidgets, Lazy Ass is written in C++ and is totally platform independent. Configuration Each Lazy Ass module has a path, a name, a description and an activity to take when idle. For example, you can decide to have a module named Run, which will be automatically selected and you will do it at the exact time that you asked. If you want to add other activities to Lazy Ass, you have to download LazyAssPanels. This is a tiny panel that can be used with any program that uses wxWidgets, so if you wanted to show 2 panel of your own in Lazy Ass, you would create 2 LazyAssPanels, each with it's own unique path name and name. Download LazyAssPanels can be downloaded from This is a rar archive containing 2 LazyAssPanels. The LazyAssPanels are located in C:\Program Files\Lazy Ass Panels\Lazy Ass Panels.jar You can decompress the archive in any way you prefer. Usage double JAR file needed You don't need a JAR file to run LazyAssPanels. The JAR file was used for online documentation and to compile the examples to an executable jar. You will need to import all the classes from the LazyAssPanels.jar file.
