A 7-page statement [text] by Young said [press release] that North Korea is "a state in which public security forces and their agents [are] continually on the lookout for people who breach the law." Young also wrote that "intimate, arbitrary forms of detention" are used, "with extremely high rates of disappearance and detention of people as a result of their status or lack of it" in North Korea. "Forcible medical examinations" are also used, he said, and "what little access to information there is is closely censored." Young wrote that the country's "system of state control is extensive" and that the country "has suffered major human rights abuses." He found that the government "seems to be imploding, with the news that both Kim Jung Il's son and his uncle have died in suspicious circumstances." Young also said that "a generation of young people has passed through an education system which shows no mercy to those who are weak and backward." Young's report will be presented to the UN Human Rights Council in June during its 30th session. The US government is facing a fresh wave of questions and legal challenges [JURIST report] related to the illegal CIA interrogation program [JURIST backgrounder] and its destruction of more than 100 videos of the sessions. Former CIA waterboard operator [JURIST report] John "Bruce" Jessen and James E. Mitchell, former top CIA and Defense Department officials, are set to appear in a high-profile criminal court on Thursday for the first time to stand trial [JURIST report] for their alleged role in the CIA's secret interrogation
