I have an SqlServer database with products in it. I need to display all non repeating products on a single page. E.g. I have a table with various products in it. If one product gets sold I can delete it in the database. So it will repeat again. I want to display all products in the database on a single page that is never repeated. So how can I do that? A: This is what you can do: Create a view (in MS SQL Server) Add to view simple field set by ID of your product (column can be anything like Id and Name) Now you can modify your product page, on Get and after Save of product query for this field, which is sent, as ID of your product Hope this helps, let me know if you need more elaboration. UPDATE Ok, here is one more thing. However, you can create stored procedure to return all products. You don't have to make any changes on your page. Use Cursor Statement for looping trough rows in table. It should be something like this EXEC [dbo].[FetchAllProducts] P.S. This stored procedure will return at least the same result as view you were trying to create. // next class 3da54e8ca3
