Salt Palace -- Just when you thought you could forget about the Salt Palace, the structure started looking better. This week's Modern Architecture Live! tour takes you inside the Salt Palace to see the spaces and how they have changed since the opening in 1993. Watch the tour below, or scroll down to read more about some of this week's tour highlights. The Pershing Verde project is part of the Salt Lake City Center for the Arts, but it looks like a whole new building. "When we were at the first design review," said Chris Gamlin, the Center for the Arts' executive director, "we came in with this idea that we want to create a beautiful plaza that has a band shell and we wanted to have a sense of theater that you might find on Broadway." This week's tour is being led by Jay McGowan and Diana Gonzalez. McGowan is a Salt Lake local who wanted to visit the Salt Palace. "I was so excited to be able to see what they had done." He says he has visited other Mormon temples, but this one still has the feeling of a temple. "It's just overwhelming." The tour is free, but donations are welcome to help the Center for the Arts.
